Full Details of How Billy the Kid Met His Fate.

Santa Fa New Mexican, excitement recently by the announce-ment that Billy the Kid, the man who and asked in Spanish, "Quieu es? dozen more, had met the fate that he had meted out to others with such fiendish pleasure, frequently without cause and generally in the most brutal manner. No report could have created a more general feeling of gratification than this, and when it was further announced that the faithful and brave Pat Garrett, he who has been the mainstay of law and order in Lincoln county, the chief reliance of the people in dark days, when danger lurked on every hand, had accomplished the crowning feat of his life by bringing down his fierce and implae-able foe single-handed, the sense of satisfaction was heightened to one of delight. The first announcement of the event was by means of a telegram received here from Las Vegas by Mr. Chisum, the stock owner, and one of the Kid's greatest enemics, simply stating: "Pat Garret killed Billy Kid near Sumner Friday night.' This dispatch was sent by Mr. M. Brunswick, a reliable man and a friend of Mr. Chisum. Mr. Brunslearned accidentally that the Kid was at or near Fort Sumner; consequently ted in the opinion that the gratitude mately become a broad-gauge road the news. A short time later the special came to The New Mexican, detailing the particulars. From them it will appear that the news was brought to Las Vegas by Mail Contractor Cosgrove, who arrived at that place yesterday. A New Mexican re-porter was enabled to secure the account from a man who was at Sumner at the time, and who helped to put Billy in his little bed the day after Garrett got through his task. This man is George Miller, a discharged soldier, who is on his way to Santa Fe. Miller says that Garrett was informed of the Kid's whereabouts while in Lincoln county, and arrived at Sumner in search of the outlaw on Friday last. At about midnight he went to the house of Pete Maxwell, accompanied by two men named John W. Poe and T M. McKinney, whom he had brought from home with him. The two men were told to stand on guard at the gate, while Garrett went on and entered the room of Mr. Maxwell. The latter was in bed at the time and Garrett quickly informed him of the object of his visit. He had scarcely done so when in walked "Billy the Kid,"

Maxwell, "Who are they?" and repeated the question quickly. Maxwell county which Pat Garrett will never committee from the latter place visit made no reply, and Kid then caught sight of Garrett. He did not apparently recognize the man, but pointed his revolver at him and asked, "Who is it?" Garrett had not had time to draw his revolver, and finding it had

Whatever his reason was his delay proved fatal. With his desperate enemy's weapon aimed full at his breast at a distance of a few feet, Pat Garrett, with the quickness and precision for which he is famed, pulled down on the Kid and fired. That shot was the last the Kid was ever to hear on this earth. He fell back upon the floor pierced through the heart, and in a moment was as dead as any of the men whom he had served in the same way, with less justice and simply to wreak petty spite or satisfy his thirst for blood. Garrett and Maxwell jumped into the middle of the room, which was lighted only by the beams of the moon, and Garrett had the satisfaction of knowing that he had fulfilled a duty from which most men would have shrunk in terror, and accomplished the task which had occupied his thoughts and energies for

The above account comes from a the scene of the killing. It is correct in all essential points, as will be seen from Garrett's own story, as detailed in accordance with his duty to the gov-
